This was the ninth of June, the truth to you I'll tell, The year nineteen and seventeen, you all remember well. Being assigned to Company F, of the 7th U. S. Engineers, I took my place in line without a thought of fear. From Fort Logan, Colorado to Leavenworth was sent, Received our first drilling in which our time was spent. Our uniforms received, 'twas on the twenty-third, The boys put them on without a single word. Big athletic contest by the Army on the Fourth, A different celebration than we were used to, now of course. August twelfth, my soldier birthday, spent training there in camp, Ere we crossed the wide, wide water, the place we went in France. A furlough I received but then it did not last, I saw my friends once...
