To answer it, I should describe what distinguishes the - proach to analysis presented here from what has by its protagonists been called 'Modern Analysis'. 'Modern Analysis' as represented in the works of the Bourbaki group or in the textbooks by Jean Dieudonné is characterized by its systematic and axiomatic treatment and by its drive towards a high level of abstraction. Given the tendency of many prior treatises on analysis to degenerate into a collection of rather unconnected tricks to solve special problems, this definitely represented a healthy achievement. In any case, for the development of a consistent and powerful mathematical theory, it seems to be necessary to concentrate solely on the internal problems and structures and to neglect the relations to other fields of scientific, even of mathematical study for a certain while. Almost complete isolation may be required to reach the level of intellectual elegance and...
