The Liar, and other stories is the latest collection of short stories from acclaimed Northern Irish author Matthew W. McFarland. In The Liar , a sharply dressed man enters the foyer of a corporate bank, and walks back out with a fortune: In the past twenty-four hours, I have convinced various people that I am a fireman, that I make my own shoes, that I am a qualified pilot, that my middle name is Wenceslas, and that I have an inoperable brain tumour. Only one of these things is true. In Making Headlines a young starlet is brutally slain in the ornamental gardens of a country estate, as a high-class fundraiser is in full swing. Only her killer can shed light on the murder. My wife of close to twenty years is slowly poisoning me, of this I am certain. In Toxic Love , a family falls apart as suspicions abound, in a chilling tale of mistrust and lies. In Ripples , a young girl flees from the police, hiding a dark secret. An old man with a strange air about him reaches out to help her - but can she trust this complete stranger? In The Savant , a construction worker narrowly escapes death in a tragic accident which takes the lives of his two brothers. He awakens in a hospital bed to the strains of music resounding in his ears, and the discovery of an unbelievable talent. In The Hospital , every parent s worst nightmare whirls around the children s ward, as a young boy with an unknown malady undergoes a multitude of medical tests. Six stories to enthral, stories which will linger in...
