H5728 2009a OCLC Number: (OCoLC)607557375 Subject: Emergency management -- United States -- Evaluation. Excerpt: . . . 11 way to accomplish this is not by reaching to other departments, it is when the Secretary can immediately order assistance from all of the elements and capabilities of the entire Department of Homeland Security. Finally, it is important to discuss DHS grants and their importance to the emergency management community. When FEMA initially joined DHS, many of its grants functions were transferred to other parts of DHS. Since Hurricane Katrina, FEMA administers almost all DHS grants, both those focused on natural hazards and those focused on terrorism. Pulling FEMA out of DHS would almost certainly disrupt grants function in the short term, and it could result in once again separating out emergency management grants from terrorism grants, which we know from experience leads to inefficiency, duplication, and waste. The synergies that have been realized in homeland security grants should be an important consideration when debating the merits of removing FEMA from DHS. Preparedness and Response The well-recognized cycle of emergency management includes preparedness, response, recovery, and mitigation. This is true of all emergency management, whether for natural or manmade hazards. I like to think of these elements as a four-legged stool. Remove one of the elements, and the stool becomes unstable. Some would suggest that we need two stools - one labeled crisis management and one labeled consequence management. The problem is that we know from the past that this structure simply does not work well. It is evident in the stovepipes that existed prior to the creation of DHS. Some in the emergency management...
