At B in Number 2 is shown a correct record from a patient who has recently lost the natural teeth and whose jaw movements have not become indefinite as a result of wearing improperly made dentures. Fig. 123. Adjusting The Condyle Path Register And Removal. Make sure that the point of the incisor path marker pin is at the point of the incisor path tracing. Return the points of the horizontal pencils to the position in Figure 106A, in contact with the tissues over the condyles, and lock them firmly in position so that they cannot be disturbed during subsequent manipulation. With an Eastman negative retouching pencil make a mark on each wing of the face bow directly at the end of the milled tract, while the pencils are in position as shown. Move both wings away from the face so that the pencils will clear and remove the face bow from the Horseshoe Plate in the manner described for Figure 107. Correcting Lack Of Fit In The Impression. Heat the end of a tracing stick in the bunsen flame until it becomes almost fluid. Trace the softened compound on the area of the impression which is defective as shown at A. Dip this section of the impression quickly into hot water, remove, seal the impression on the ridge and chill the compound in position until it is set. While...
